Instructions and questions for completing network grid

1.　Read "Now we are going to talk about the people in your network who are 18 years or older – people who you interact with, people you receive support from, people you consider to be part of your world. I will ask you about four different types of networks. People you mention can live in this village or elsewhere. You can name the same person more than once.

2.　Ask the following questions. Write the names they provide in the name column (a).
   (1)　Think of the people who provide you material assistance. For example, someone who loans you money, someone who buys things for you in the market, or someone who gives you food or clothes. Please tell me the names of three people that you go to for this type of support.
   (2)　Think of the people who provide you practical assistance. For example, they help you take care of your children, or they can help with household chores, or they can help you with trading or agriculture. Please tell me the names of three people that you go to for this type of support.
   (3)　Think of the people that you can learn from, either because they give you advice or instructions, or because you see what they do and try to do the same. Please tell me the names of three such people.
   (4)　Think of the people who give you emotional support. For example, you can talk to them when you are sad, or when you have an argument with your husband or his mother, or when your children misbehave. Please tell me the names of three people who give you emotional support most often.

3.　Go through all the names in the list (up to 12 names). For each person do the following:
   (b)　Find the person in the map/chart/list and write the code in column (b).
   (c)　Ask: "What is your relationship with (name of person)? You can mention more than one relationship. For example, a person can be your aunt, and can also be your health provider." Write the relationships. Relationships can be family relationship (such as mother, husband, sister, co-wife, etc.) or friend, or it can be a different type of relationship, such as shop-keeper, co-worker, health worker, teacher of the respondent's children, member of her grin or tontine, etc. It can also be a priest, Imam or other religious leader.
   (d)　Ask:"Does (name of person) live in this village, or elsewhere?" If 'elsewhere', ask "In what town does (name of person) live?
   (e)　Ask:" How close would you say you are to (name of person)? Very close, close, or not close?" Write the response.
   (f)　ASK: "Does this person influence your decisions planning your family, how many children to have and when to have them"?
   (g)　Ask: "Would you say that (name of person) approves of people spacing their births and using a family planning method to do so?"
   (h)　Ask: "Have you discussed family planning, how many children to have or when to have them with this person?"

4.　After you have completed columns (a) – (h), ask the respondent if any of the people she mentioned are relais.

　　If a person is mentioned in more than one network, you do not need to complete the information a second time. Instead write the respondent number from the first network the person is mentioned in the code space. For example, if the respondent's sister is the third person mentioned in Material support, and the second person mentioned in Practical support, then in the line item corresponding to the second person in Practical support write M3 in the code column, and ignore the rest of the line.

5.　If the respondent's husband was not mentioned in any of the networks, ask "Does your husband provide you with any of these types of support? If she responds positively, complete the Husband line, otherwise leave it blank. Repeat this for the respondent's mother, mother-in-law, and co-wives.

Ask:
"After this phase of the study is complete, including analysis of the data, we will come back to the village to conduct longer interviews with some women and men. We will choose participants for the interviews based on the picture we get about communication and how information is shared in the village. We will look at different characteristics of village residents, and how they responded to each questions, to try and get a big variety of participants, Only 12 men and 12 women in this village will be interviewed."

Will you be willing to participate in these future interviews? Can we add your name to the list of people that we will draw participants from?
